JFC Motion Extends Uncertainty, Signals Changes to Long Term Care

Madison, WI – Today's JFC motion does not remove Long Term Care changes from the budget. It makes similar changes to what was in the Governor's original proposal.

"This motion doesn't reform our current system, it indicates Family Care and IRIS will be replaced with something new," said Beth Swedeen, BPDD Executive Director. "These changes do not start with the current long-term care system. It makes changes to the system now and authorizes unknown changes to occur in the future."

BPDD calls for timely and authentic participation at every stage of the development of all proposals and changes to long term care from people with disabilities, their families, advocates, and small Wisconsin businesses who are involved in our current long-term care system.
